Illustrated guide on moths and butterflies published

HE Zoological Survey of India (ZSI) published a book entitled. 'An Illustrated guide to the Lepidoptera of India: taxonomic procedures, family characters, diversily and distribution.' The book is authored by Dhrit Banerjee, Director, Zoological Survey of India along with Navneet Singh, Rahul Joshi and P C Pathania, scientists of ZSI and a Lepidoptera expert from Hong Kong, R C Kendrick.

The present work is one

The present work is one of the outputs from the 6th of the outputs from the 6th Asian Lepidoptera Conservation Symposium, hosted by ZSI in 2019, where a dire need was broadly discussed for a book which can guide both amateurs and professionals in the field of lepidopterology. The project was initiated during the lockdowns of the Covid-19 pandemic. Subsequently, the authors continually updated the information for four years and finally the outcome in diagnostic characters for all the families and superfamilies of butterflies and moths found in India. Key attributes of the basal splitting and the su-perfamily compositions of various clades of butterflies and moths are summarised.

The book outlines the methods to collect and curate voucher material in the field, taxonomic procedures followed in laboratory, superfamily and family level identification and the knowledge about the lepidopteran diversity and patterns of distribution, globally. Three chapters, authored by Paul Waring (UK), Mark Sterling (Natural History Museum, UK), Gaurab Nandi Das and Martin Kornvicka (University of South Bohemia, Czech Republic) are dedicated to equip the readers with various technical and simpler, natural history field guide style is the core strength of the book.

For India, the illustrated guide is the first ever of its kind.
The diversity of global Lepidoptera is updated to 1,65,320 species, 143 families and 43 superfamilies occur in India. Importantly, in the book, the authors rectified a taxonomic glitch and described a new family of Lepidoptera i.e., Heliocosmidae.
